Many clinical branches need strong anatomy knowledge for their successful clinical practice. The young anatomists should get an opportunity to work in those clinical subject, as a basic science expert. The panel discussion on "Exploring clinical scope for Anatomist" by the eminent panelists may help in opening some new doors on this issue.

Day 1

17th March 2023

Medical Education has undergone a paradigm shift over the last five years. Our pedagogy is no longer confined to the traditional “chalk and talk” way of teaching. We have implemented a more integrated and holistic approach through CBME. In anatomy learning, we are transitioning from theoretical anatomy to a more practical and clinical approach with the aid of technology-assisted learning. The rapid advancement in technology and artificial intelligence, at times, seems to threaten the hands-on teaching style of traditional cadaveric dissections. Yet, at other times, the age-old method of learning by touch and feel enjoys dominance. The occurrence of a worldwide pandemic amidst all of this necessitated a complete resort to online anatomy teaching-learning methods. The post-pandemic times thus brought about a healthy mix of live-interactive as well as technology-aided anatomy education, which emphasizes more on clinical skills and a much-needed integration with the other basic and clinical sciences. What does the future of anatomy look like? On day one, our expert speakers will speak on this very broad topic under the contexts of CBME, post-COVID anatomy teaching, and the use of e-learning in modern anatomy education.

Day 2

18th March 2023

A change in the syllabus is done, but the mammoth task we face now is bringing about a change in the mindsets of traditional educators. Maybe it's time to say goodbye to the old ways, but where do we stand today, in 2023? How far have we reached in this pedagogical metamorphosis? These are the questions that we intend to discuss and debate on day two. Here, we delve even deeper into the clinical side of the anatomy world. Insights will be shared on Clinical and Problem-based learning and the challenges we face today in implementing CBME. Finally, the role of an anatomist is no longer just that of an educator. This field has great potential in clinical fields too. For the same, a panel discussion between renowned clinicians will add a retrospective outlook on the scope of clinical anatomy and how the modern anatomist can design a promising career in the clinical realm.
